INTRODUCTION

This research guide discusses federal and state securities law research. It covers research in statutory law, legislative history, administrative law, and case law through the use of print and online resources in the Jacob Burns Law Library.

To determine if a source listed in this guide is available in Bloomberg Law, Lexis Advance, or Westlaw Edge, enter the name of the source in the search box at the top of the page and then select the source from the drop-down list.

To obtain Bloomberg Law, Lexis Advance, or Westlaw Edge credentials, email electronicservices@law.gwu.libanswers.com and include your GWid number.

Other databases such as HeinOnline and Cheetah (Wolters Kluwer) can be accessed directly from the links of this list, Jacob Burns Law Library Databases, A-Z.
I. GENERAL OVERVIEW OF SECURITIES LAW

Securities are written evidence of ownership or creditorship, usually issued by a company that is attempting to finance its start-up or expansion. The issuance and trading of securities are governed by both federal and state law. The general function of the federal securities laws is to ensure adequate disclosure to the investor, who then determines whether to invest in a particular security. In every transaction involving securities, the researcher must determine to what extent both federal and state laws apply.

A. Federal Law

The following statutes are recognized as the major acts governing federal securities law:

The Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 are the securities statutes that are most often applicable to securities problems. The Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 substantially amended the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and other statutes, and created new provisions independent of existing securities laws. Other statutes may apply to a particular securities problem, and more than one statute may apply at the same time to that problem.
Congress has delegated general responsibility for administration of most of these securities acts to the Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”). The SEC’s duties include:

1. Promulgating rules and regulations, including those imposing disclosure requirements on those dealing in securities;
2. Issuing informal statements regarding those securities (general interpretive releases and case-specific letter rulings called “no-action letters”); and
3. In some instances, bringing action to enforce compliance with the securities laws.

In connection with its responsibility for the administration of securities laws, the SEC may initiate an administrative hearing against a person or firm respecting a registered security to determine responsibility for a violation and to impose sanctions. These hearings often result in a settlement rather than an order. Researchers should keep in mind that a part of many settlement agreements is that the parties agree to keep the details of the proceeding confidential, making research virtually impossible.

Congress passed the Securities Investor Protection Act (“SIPA”) to protect the customers of insolvent brokers and dealers. The Securities Investor Protection Corporation (“SIPC”), a non-governmental public corporation created by Congress, administers SIPA. The SIPC has duties similar to those of the SEC.

Congress passed the Dodd–Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act in 2010 in response to the global financial crisis that began in 2007. Title IX of Dodd-Frank, commonly known as the “Investor Protection and Securities Reform Act of 2010,” makes some significant changes to securities regulation, clarifies the SEC’s authority, and authorizes the SEC and other federal regulatory agencies to make rules relating to investor protection, asset securitization, hedge fund regulation, and derivatives.

In an effort to ease regulatory burdens on smaller companies and to facilitate capital formation, President Obama enacted the Jumpstart Our Business Startups (JOBS) Act on April 5, 2012.
B. State Law

Federal securities laws preserve states’ authority to regulate securities, meaning that securities activities may be subject to both federal and state laws.

Securities laws can be found in every state. State securities laws are popularly referred to as “blue sky laws,” a term that originated in the Supreme Court opinion Hall v. Geiger-Jones, 242 U.S. 539 (1917), which describes the purpose of state securities laws as being the prevention of “speculative schemes which have no more basis than so many feet of blue sky.” In 1956 the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws created the Uniform Securities Act (“USA”) to make the states’ securities laws more uniform and modeled it after the Securities and Exchange Act. The USA was revised in 1985, amended in 1988, revised in 2002, and amended in 2005. Seventeen states and one territory have adopted the USA.

In the other states, either an administrative agency or the state’s attorney general is responsible for the administration and enforcement of securities laws. Either the agency or the attorney general will promulgate rules, policy statements, orders, attorney general opinions, or a combination of these to carry out its mission.

II. RESEARCHING FEDERAL SECURITIES LAW

The most important primary materials comprising the body of federal securities law are statutes, rules, releases, no-action letters, and administrative and judicial decisions. The body of state securities law consists of state securities statutes, regulations, administrative decisions, attorney general opinions, and court decisions.

These documents often are available in “official” sources published by the applicable government body. However, the official publications of these governmental bodies tend to lack the indexing, explanations, and other added features of the privately published “unofficial” texts.

A. Statutory Materials

Federal securities laws are passed by Congress and first published as public laws. These public laws are available from the following sources:

Online:
GovInfo - Public and Private Laws (PDF, 104th Cong. 95/96 – 116th Cong 19/20)
Eventually, public laws are bound and published. These are available from the following sources:

United States Statutes at Large (official)

Online:
- GovInfo - United States Statutes at Large (1951-2012)
- Bloomberg Law - U.S. Public Laws & Statutes at Large (1778-)
- HeinOnline - U.S. Statutes at Large (PDF, 1789-2012)

U.S. Code Congressional and Administrative News (USCCAN) (unofficial)

Online: Westlaw - U.S. Code Congressional and Administrative News
Print: KF 48.W45 BURNS (2ND FL)

United States Code (official version)

Online:
- Bloomberg Law - U.S. Code (current)

Print: KF62 2012 BURNS (2ND FL)

United States Code (unofficial versions)

Online:
The current texts of federal securities laws are available in the following topical databases:

Online:
- Bloomberg Law - Securities Practice Center
- Westlaw - Securities Statutes & Court Rules
- Cheetah (Wolters Kluwer) - Securities - All > Acts & Statutes

Note: In securities law practice, attorneys and courts often refer to the section numbers of the original Act rather than the section numbers of the law’s codified text. For example, Section 77a of Title 15 of the U.S.C. is referred to as Section 1 of the Securities Act. This is often confusing to the researcher since the sections’ numbers are not the same.

B. Legislative Histories

It is often necessary in federal securities law research to determine the intent of Congress in creating a law. This can be accomplished by analyzing its legislative history. Listed below are selected sources of compiled legislative history documents of federal securities laws.

Online: HeinOnline - Corporate Fraud Responsibility: A Legislative History of the Sarbanes-Oxley

Print: SL3, KF9236.5.C665 2003

This legislative history contains materials for all the federal securities laws and amendments to those laws supplemented through 1990, including bills and reports for all seven major securities statutes, Congressional Record floor debate, and high quality photocopies of the original sources. SL3, KF1433.8 1983

This article is the personal recollections of a former member (1934-37) and chair (1935-37) of the SEC regarding the introduction and enactment of the Securities Act. It does not include the full text of legislative history documents or a legislative history chronology.

This selected bibliography by the then-SEC Librarian includes books, law review articles, and a list of bills, reports and hearings relating to the Securities Act, Exchange Act, Public Utility Holding Company Act, Trust Indenture Act, Investment Company Act, Investment Advisers Act and Small Business Investment Act, and amendments thereto.

This 15 volume collection contains the text of the Dodd-Frank legislation, previous bill versions, related bills, committee reports, committee documents, hearings, floor debate, and Congressional Budget Office reports.

C. Regulations

Securities regulations are first officially published in the Federal Register. The Federal Register includes final rules, proposed rules, and SEC notices. Rules that first appear in the daily Federal Register are later codified in the Code of Federal Regulations (C.F.R.).

The official rules covering the 1933 and 1934 acts begin at 17 C.F.R. Part 230. The C.F.R. refers to each rule by a numbering system that mirrors the numbers the rules were assigned when the SEC originally promulgated them (e.g., Rule 144 of the Securities Act is 17 C.F.R. 230.144). Attorneys and the courts generally refer to the commonly used Rule numbers rather than the official C.F.R. citations.

D. Other Administrative Materials

In addition to regulations, the SEC and the state regulatory bodies also publish other important administrative materials. These include releases, statistics, and agency administrative proceedings. Listed below are sources of these types of documents.

1. Annual Report of the Securities and Exchange Commission

   In addition to providing a review of the SEC’s activities, the Annual Report contains statistical tables on securities trading activities. Continued by the SEC’s Performance and Accountability Report.

   Online: SEC website: http://www.sec.gov/about/annrep.shtml (1935-)

   Print: SL3, KF1444 .A87a (1935-2003)

2. SEC News Digest

   Provides daily information on recent Commission actions, including enforcement proceedings, rule filings, policy statements, and upcoming Commission meetings. Since 2015 SEC renamed the News Digest, it is now called What’s New.

   Online:
   - SEC.gov - What's New on the SEC Website Archive (current)
   - SEC.gov - SEC News Digest Archives (July 1956-2013)
   - Westlaw - SEC News Digest (July 1987-2013)

3. SEC Docket

   Weekly publication that contains releases issued by the SEC regarding securities, litigation, international issues, the Freedom of Information Act, and self-regulatory organizations (including notices of rule changes for these organizations), indexed by topic and case. After 1981, published by CCH.

   The Library receives print approximately one week after published; microfiche copy approximately four months after published. Releases found in SEC Docket are approximately three weeks late.

   Online:
4. Securities and Exchange Commission Decisions and Reports (formerly entitled Decisions)

Contains decisions and reports from administrative proceedings under the major securities acts. Each volume includes an alphabetical table of decisions and reports covered in that volume and cites to the act and act’s section number involved.

LexisNexis contains many of these federal and state administrative documents in the federal and state securities databases. To access the Securities databases on LexisNexis, select “Securities” from the “Area of Law—By Topic” from the first page.

- Westlaw - SEC Administrative Decisions & Guidance (1933-)

E. Federal Court Decisions

In securities law, court cases arise when the SEC brings a civil action or, through the Justice Department, a criminal action against a violator of the securities laws. A state administrator may have similar powers. In some instances, investors may bring their own civil actions against violators of the federal or state securities laws.

Cheetah (Wolters Kluwer) - Federal Securities Law Reporter (CCH)
Westlaw – Federal Securities Law Reporter (CCH)

A comprehensive resource covering the federal laws and rules that regulate the issuance of securities, corporate disclosure, insider reporting, broker-dealer requirements and duties, self-regulatory organizations, investment companies, investment advisers, and accountants and attorneys practicing before the Securities and Exchange Commission. The reporter provides the full text of the Securities Act of 1933, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, Investment Company Act of 1940, Investment Advisers Act of 1940, the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, and other federal securities laws, as well as the regulations and forms of the SEC. It also includes CCH explanations that discuss, summarize and coordinate law, rule interpretations and court decisions. In addition, the reporter provides the full text of federal securities court opinions, SEC regulatory releases, and SEC no-action letter from July 1993 to present. The reporter is organized by act, with SEC rules, CCH explanations, and other materials interspersed among the law sections to which they relate. Updated weekly.

III. RESEARCHING STATE SECURITIES LAWS

A. General Resources

Online: Westlaw - Blue Sky Law Reporter (CCH)

The Blue Sky Law Reporter is the most widely known and used commercial state securities reference tool. This reporter includes the statutes, rules, and many of the policy statements, releases and orders issued by the “blue sky” offices in each of the 50 states, plus the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. It also includes a copy of the Uniform Act and addresses and telephone numbers for the various blue sky offices. SL3, KF1436.5.B58 (current to 2006)

B. State Statutory Materials

The publication of state securities laws parallels that of federal laws. Sources for state securities laws are:

Officially published session laws

Online:
State government websites (varies by state)
HeinOnline - Session Laws Library (coverage varies by state)

Microform: MICROFICHE (LL2) (coverage varies by state) (found in the drawers for Hein’s State Session Laws)

State codes

Online:
State government websites (varies by state)

Westlaw - Securities Statutes & Court Rules (current)

Print: BURNS (2ND FL)

Microform: MICROFICHE (LL2) (coverage varies by state) (found in the drawers for Hein’s Superseded State Statutes and Codes)

C. State Legislative History Materials

State legislative histories are more difficult to locate. Often states do not publish background documents on a particular piece of legislation.

Lexis Advance - Legislative History (by state)
Westlaw - Legislative History, State: Jurisdictions

Other resources for locating state legislative history materials include:

Law Librarians’ Society of Washington, DC, Inc (LLSDC) - Legislative Source Book: State Legislatures, State Laws & State Regulations (links to state legislature websites)

State Legislative Sourcebook (Government Research Service 1985-)
Provides a listing by state of where and how you can locate legislative history documents. Published annually; library retains current edition only. READY REFERENCE (1ST FL), JK2495.S689 (Current)

D. State Regulations & Other Administrative Materials
State regulations can usually be found online by searching for the state and its administrative code. Other state administrative materials such as policy statements, releases, and orders can be found in the following resources.

Online:
- Bloomberg Law – State Blue Sky Laws & Chart Builders
- Lexis Advance - State Codes (coverage varies by state)
- Westlaw - Securities Statutes & Court Rules (current)

E. State Court Decisions
Online:

Print: State court decisions are published in state and regional reporters, and digests. BURNS (2ND FL)

IV. SELECTED SECONDARY SOURCES
Secondary sources include treatises, hornbooks, form-books, and journals. Most secondary sources focus on federal securities laws, but usually include a section on “blue sky” laws as well.

Additional securities law materials can be located by using JACOB, the Library’s catalog: https://www.law.gwu.edu/library

A. American Law Reports (ALR) is a multi-series publication comprised of articles that focus on unsettled areas of the law (often a split between federal circuits or state courts).
- Westlaw - American Law Reports – Securities
B. Treatises

Treatises are single or multi-volume works that provide an in-depth, scholarly analysis on a particular topic. Treatises are often updated periodically.
