Biographical Note: Belva Ann Lockwood (1830-1917) was a graduate of the National University Law School in 1873 and was admitted to the District of Columbia Bar. She then wrote a bill to allow all qualified women attorneys to practice in any federal court. In 1879, the bill was passed by Congress and signed by Rutherford B. Hayes. Lockwood was the first female member of the U.S. Supreme Court Bar. In 1884 and 1888, Lockwood ran for president of the United States as a candidate of the National Equal Rights Party. She was an advocate for women’s issues and active in women’s suffrage organizations.

Each year, the Law Association for Women of The George Washington University Law School honors the enduring legacy of women’s rights pioneer Belva Ann Lockwood. This award is traditionally given to a GW Law alumna who encompasses the legacy of the “irrepressible” Belva Ann Lockwood.

Scope and Content: The materials are primarily from the Belva Ann Lockwood awards ceremonies. The collection also contains a 1933 article on Belva Ann Lockwood.
